Motivational intervention for family members living with a relative with a substance-related disorder

Cassandra Borges Bortolon

1- The Intervention motivation for family members living with SRD was studied for phone use. Could this intervention be used in other contexts?

Yes. We are currently developing PhD research to assess the face-to-face effectiveness of Motivational Intervention. And others digital platform are similar to procedures used for phone.

2- In study published about Intervention motivational for family members living with SRD relative, was mentioned about codependency. When you use 'Inassertive' in your presentation, do you use the similar 'codependency'?

Yes. In our study codependency was considered as an interactional problem between the family and the user as an alternative to solving the problem, according to Noriega et al., (2008). Therefore, the inassertive term could be understanding the person with difficulty to truly express their thoughts, emotions, behaviors and opinions, which also generates conflicts of interaction and problem solving.
